Delhi Celebrates!

ART GALLERIES

It was post 1947, when an artistic infrastructure was developed in Delhi through the efforts of the Delhi Shilpi Chakra (an artist group) and India's first private art gallery the Dhoomimal Gallery.

With the government's first five year plan (1951-56), India adopted a cultural policy that established the Lalit Kala Academy and the National Gallery of Modern Art in Delhi. This made Delhi an important artistic centre, a status that had been concentrated for so long, first in Bengal and then in Bombay.

Contemporary Indian art is flourishing and Delhi has an ever changing roster of galleries, paintings and exhibitions. Everything from abstract art to sombre studies of urban life can be found in these exhibits.

National Gallery of Modern Art: One of India's major art galleries, near India Gate at the Eastern end of Rajpath, was the former residence of the Maharaja of the Jaipur. It houses an excellent collection of works by both Indian and colonial artists dating from 1850. The gallery has a collection of more than 15,000 paintings, sculptures and graphics.
