A DREAM DESTINATION

TASTE

Nowhere in India you will find so many kinds of cuisines - each with its own pedigree, which has evolved over the years. While Delhi's ethnic specialities can be identified as Bania, Mughal and Punjabi - the European and Chinese food available are of also high standard.

Every locality in South and East Delhi has one or two good eating places serving the hybrid of Punjabi and Mughlai food. The menu here is predictable with the all time favourite Tandoori Chicken, Butter Chicken and some Paneer or Cottage Cheese.

The most famous non-vegetarian restaurant in Shahjahanabad area (Old Delhi) is Karim, the restaurant has been run by the same family for approx. 90 years. Mutton Korma, Ishtew and Barra Kababs are musts for the gourmet visiting.

Another Delhi's favourite is Rajma-Chawal, which is available outside most office complexes. Special mention must be made of Punjabi favourite Chhole-Bhature, which you could get almost everywhere anytime, though one of the best places offering Chhole-Bhature is Kwaliti in Connaught Place.

An important part of Bania food culture is its savouries, Chaats and snacks, for which Delhi is famous. Though every locality has at least one or two eateries catering to this but the famous ones are there in Bengali Market in New Delhi and Haldiram at Mathura Road and Lajpat Nagar. Fatehpuri, Chandni Chowk again are famous for Delhi's Chaats and traditional sweets. For those with western taste, Delhi has a host of excellent confectioneries. Wenger's in Connaught Place, Sugar and Spice and Nirula's with branches in different localities are among the best.

Baujee ka Dhaba at Garden of Five Senses, M.B. Road, Saket New Delhi offers authentic North West Frontier Cuisine. while another restaurant Magique Food offers mughlai food. Timing: 11:00 am - 8:00 pm

Dilli Haat - Bang opposite INA Market, Dilli Haat is a great place to sample food from all over India. You may not experience the sumptuous Naga and Mizo food elsewhere in Delhi. Coupled with delightfully informal ambience, Dilli Haat is the right place for gastronomers with a tongue for ethnic food.
